LITERARY ITEMS

A letter of three pages, from Jonathan Swift GLOBE DICKENS! to Sir William Temple, petitioning for testimentals to enable him to enter into hely orders, was lately sold in London for $55.

Mr. John Stuart Mill has had conferred upon him the highest honors at the disposal of the law faculty of the University of Halle. The same faculty refused a Dke honor to Count Bismarck, though when a student he matriculated in law.

Doctor Bæckh, the learned Hellenist, lately deceased, has left his rich library to the Berlin University. The death of this gentleman leaves vacant the honorary Chancellership of the Order of Merit for Sciences and Arts. This post was occupied in the first place by Alex. von Humbeldt, then by Savigny, and before Beeckh, by the painter Cornelius.

Two more volumes of the literary remains of Prederick Rückert have lately appeared, the one a Frankfort, the other at Leipsie. The first, "Lieder and Spriiche," is a selection from his store of lying and terms and true and springs in verse; the second is entirely devoted to translations, contaming versions of some of the idyls of Theocritus, the "Birds" of Aristophanes, and the "Sakantala" of Kalidasa.

The Germans publish a Shakespeare Yearbook, of which the second volume has lately appeared, under the editorship of F. Bodenstedt. It contains valuable critical papers by Lindner, Visehner, Dr. Ingleby, and Delius; a record, by Otto Devrient, of his father's management of the Carlsruhe Theater; while Cohn sums up the Shakespecian bibliography, and Urrici the history of the year.

"Aldo Manuzio, the famous printer of the Aldo Manuzio, the lamous prince of the Aldies editions of the classics," says the Halies of Florence, left very incomplete memorials of his own life. Lately M Armand Baschet has had the good fortune to discover at Venice, among the archives of the Princes of the House of Gonzago, a number of Manuzio's letters which throw an interesting light upon his biography. They have just been published by N. Antonio Antonello, a Venetian printer, in a style of which the old Aldine himself would not be ashamed."

The death is announced of Dr. Costello, which has just taken place in Paris. The deceased gentleman was a native of Ireland, having been born near Dublin in the year 1800. Dr. Costello was formerly proprietor of the Wye House Asylum for the Insane, Brentford, and known for his valuable papers "On the Reform and Management of Lunatic Asylums." He was a great contributor to medical liferature and the author of several works of great celebrity in his day, but that which has given his hance a permanent distinction is the "Cyclopecia of Practical Surgery."

1 Sixteen dellars were lately obtained, at a literary sale in London, for a letter from William Cowper, the poet, in which he writes: "It is a great thing indeed to be a poet, and does not happen to more than one man in a century. Churchill, the great Churchill, deserved the name of poet; such ratural, unforced effusions of genius, the world, I believe, has never seen since the days of Shakespeare." At present, Churchill scarcely ranks among the third-class poets, though his place is among the second-class satirists.

The Athenœum, which since Mr. Hepworth Dixen's visit to this country, often speaks justly and generously of American books, has a highly favorable totice of Bayard Taylor's "Colorado." "Those who betice of Bayard Taylor's "Colorado." "Those who have traveled with Mr. Bayard Taylor already know with what care he reproduces the landscape over which he drives. In these pages the prairies are made to live. We see the long swell of the rising upland over which the buffalors roam, the dry sandy ravines in which the ratife-bankes glide, the bunches of wild sage under which the wolf lurks and the prairie-bens cluck, the countless Bocks of golden flowers, and the tender green of the weet bunch grass. We see in his pages the strong bullock train, the emigrant's corral, the sunburnt miner coming home from the mountains, the vicious party of road agents. Here we neet the Jew peddler, the swarthy ranchman, the daring trapper, each in his big boots and his slouch hat, and with his revolver and his bowie-knife handy in his strong leathern belt. Under his hearty description we come to love this virgin country and these rough squatters and teamsters."

Musical Instruments.

A GREAT SOUL IN A SMALL BODY.

THE MATHUSHEK PIANOS recently invested by Mr. Prederick Mathushek (auther of the principal improvements in pianos), differ from all others in having the strings cross the frame in both directions. This equalizes the strain upon the frame, and issures greater durability and leager continuance in tuse than can be had by any other method. Thus BRIDGE, also, runs the whole length of the sounding-board, an entirely new feature, which gives greater power and better fone than is found in any other instruments.

The smallest size equare, the Collera, four feet nine inches long, seven ectaves, equals in all respects the full size of other makers; while the full size, the Originarmal, in equal to any Concear Granz.

Franzi Schlottran, the eminent plantst, says: "The Collera I consider the chef d' curre in the musical world. Its tone is not equaled by the largest sized square or agright Planous of any factory in this country."

H. MOLLENHAUER, of the Conservatory of Music, says: "I with great pleasure bear my unqualified testimous to the great superiority of the Mathushek Fianos over all others." Many other testimonials equally strong have been freely given. Picase call and eramine, or send for Descriptive Circular to BARLOW & DOEHLER, Sole Agents, No. 694 Broadway, New-York.
